

Pet Silver Fox From Vulcan Struts Along Calgary's Main Street

CALGARY, July 15.—One fortunate hunk of fur, that won't ever get to be just the fur piece around lady's neck, is "Buddy," three-month-old white-faced silver fox pet of Marjory Lommatzsch from Vulcan.

But Buddy is not like an ordinary little fox, a fact that was quite apparent, as, at the end of a leash, she strutted proudly down 8th Ave. Tuesday. No, ever since, as the runt of a litter of pups, she was chosen by Marjorie as a special pet, Buddy has cultivated such pampered tastes as a yen for chocolate. And at the mention of a possible dish of ice cream her perky black ears point up, and her body fairly quivers with anticipation.

Not the first of such pets is Buddy, as Marjorie's family owns a fox ranch. However, each one has its own characteristics, declared Marjorie. Buddy gets along very well with the pet cats at the ranch, but fur flies when she is in reach of the dogs.

She is very friendly and gentle, amiably suffering the fondlings of excited children who gather about whenever she is brought to the city.
